

Wednesday Thoughts

Today Holy Week 2020 is over – where and what to do now, with many pressures due to present world-wide shut down of familiar activities like work, play and relaxation? Thousands of young folk remain on what should have been the Easter holiday – instead unless our role is classed as vital to the existence of those in need all those youngsters and their parents or guardians are confined to the place they call home.

Kindness and generosity – those are this week’s Fruits of the Spirit and on which we focus today. Both pose a big challenge for young and not-so-young alike. Even those we love the most irritate and annoy us at times – now it’s for us to put both fruits into practice - we need to work at being kind and generous with all our words and actions and keep our feelings under control – not too easy when you’re trapped, frustrated and see no ending or way out. Remember everyone you know has a phone and like you they too need an outlet – see how many calls you can make every day and in the evening add them up and hopefully you’ll have shown kindness and generous thoughts to those you call as a result of all this unwanted ‘spare’ time!

And a final thought – the longer you travel along life’s road the more you understand that frequently the bad things can produce something good – people are talking to one another – strangers and neighbours are greeting each other from doorways and when out for a short walk. When this horrid war is over let’s ensure we don’t revert to type again

Blessing:

May you let the Spirit of God tend you.

May the seed of Jesus grow within you, strong and true.

May God the Father bring your fruit to maturity, and may the love of God multiply, forty, sixty, one hundred fold through all you do. Amen

Blessings to everyone
